Invitation for Submission of Manuscripts on Health and Equity for Possible Publication in Journal of Health, Population and Nutrition

The Journal of Health, Population and Nutrition (JHPN) will publish theme-based issues, beginning in its March 2003 Issue to highlight findings of some important emergent research issues from different regions of the world. The theme-based issues will also carry the regular articles received for publication in the Journal.

The first theme-based issue (March 2003) will be on Equity and Health. This special issue may include original research articles on concepts, measurements, and methodological issues, empirical findings on the situation of health equity, and interventions to reduce health inequity. Reports on global evaluation, national, or subnational pro-equity activities and the experiences gained by way of impact and the process of implementation are also of interest.

Potential authors are requested to submit their manuscripts by end of September 2002. While preparing the manuscript, please follow the Vancouver Style. Information for Contributors can be viewed at, or downloaded from the website of, the Journal.

The JHPN is a peer-reviewed quarterly journal and is indexed by the major international indexing systems. It is freely available through the Internet (http://www.icddrb.org/jhpn).

The other upcoming themes are:

1. Vaccines in Developing Countries
2. Reproductive Health
3. Vector-borne Diseases in Asia
4. Community Nutrition Intervention
5. Health Sector Reform
6. Sexually Transmitted Infections
7. Population/Demography

For any further information or queries, please do not hesitate to contact our Guest Editor Dr. Abbas Bhuiya (abbas@icddrb.org) for March 2003 special issue.

David A. Sack, M.D.
Editor-in-Chief
Journal of Health, Population and Nutrition, and Director
ICDDR,B: Centre for Health and Population Research